MOTOR PRODUCTS IN BIG DEMAND

Asiatic Markets Present Attractive Prospects.

HOOVER COMPLETES SURVEY

American Automobiles Dominate the Far Eastern Markets, With Japan Our Best Customer, the Department of Commerce Report Says. Automobile May Prove Great Factor in Development of China.

Washington, Nov. 25.—According to a survey made by the department of commerce, American automobiles dominate the markets in Asia.

In its survey of the markets the department says the Asiatic automotive market presents attractive potential prospects that should not be overlooked by American exporters, although the comparatively low purchasing power of the people, the poor roads and unsettled conditions in most countries are serious obstacles in the way of rapid development. The demand for motor products is no longer limited to the small group of foreigners in the seaports, but is being extended to the natives of the interior, it is stated. The department's report continues:

"Japan continues our best market in Asia this year, with British India second and the Philippine islands third. Japan, the Philippine islands, China, Ceylon and Siam have purchased more passenger cars during the first nine months of 1924 than the total bought during the year 1923. Japan is the only country in this group which takes almost as many trucks as passenger cars. In 1923, due to the earthquake, the number of trucks consumed in this market exceeded the number of passenger cars greatly, while the number of passenger cars during the first nine months of 1924 exceeded only slightly the number of trucks shipped to that country."

It is estimated that there are now 25,000 passenger cars and trucks and 1,494 motorcycles registered in Japan. The earthquake disaster of Sept. 1, 1923, destroyed a large proportion of automobiles and trucks then in use in Tokio and Yokohama. These cities contain most of the cars in the country and demand for immediate replacement was intensified by the fact that other means of transportation also were crippled.

"Due to the strong position gained by American cars in this market, it was to American manufacturers that Japan looked to fill its urgent requirements. The duty on motor trucks was removed and that on passenger cars cut in half for a period commencing Sept. 17, 1923, and ending March 31, 1924."

"As a result, more American motor trucks were exported during 1923 to Japan than to any other country, and its position as the leading truck market for American manufacturers was maintained during the first months of 1924."

"China has an estimated registration of 8,524 passenger cars, 1,150 trucks and 942 motorcycles. It is uniformly believed that when China has a system of highways, automotive vehicles will prove to be a great factor in developing a modern industrial nation."

Washington, Nov. 25.—A claim in behalf of the state of Oklahoma for 37½ per cent of the government's one-eighth royalty of the oil production from disputed lands along the Red river between Oklahoma and Texas, and a further claim to 3 per cent of the gross production since the lands have been held in receivership, were laid before officials of the interior department by George F. Short, attorney general of Oklahoma.

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 25.—Three members of the executive committee of the United Mine Workers of America met here to make plans and preparations for the care of striking miners and their families of the Kanawha coal fields. While union officials place the number of strikers at between 35,000 and 50,000, the Kanawha Coal Operators' association says that there are fewer than 3,000 miners out.

GOMPERS' IDEA PREVAILS

Labor Federation Not to Form New Political Party.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 25.—Rejecting proposals that organized labor form a separate political party in the United States, the convention of the American Federation of Labor here voted almost unanimous re-endorsement of the so-called Gompers' non-partisan political policy.

Two resolutions asking the federation's participation in a new party were unfavorably reported by the committee on resolutions. The committee at the same time recommended acceptance of the special report of the executive council urging continued nonpartisan activity. The resolutions committee report was adopted by a viva voce vote, in which only one opposing vote was recorded.

EVIDENCE FOUND AT MINISTER'S HOME

Woman Slain Before Body Entered Furnace, Officials Say.

Columbus, Nov. 25.—Evidence that Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, wife of Rev. V. V. Sheatsley, was murdered before her body entered the furnace was found at the Sheatsley residence in Cexley, officials say.

This evidence includes the following: Fingerprints, blood-stained upon the outside of the house near the rear door, upon the door leading into the cellar, and upon one of the not-air pipes of the furnace; spots upon the kitchen floor, which, from their appearance, are blood stains; a table cover, also with apparent blood stains, jammed in a closet; a small quantity of fluid, which appears to be coagulated blood, found in the overturned lid of a fruit jar in the fruit room, just off the furnace room of the cellar; a burlap sack, having upon it a large stain, found in a field about 100 feet west of the house; a pair of trousers stained with something which looks like blood.

Rev. Mr. Sheatsley, who is at his old home in Stark county, has been insistent since Wednesday that his wife committed suicide by crawling into the furnace. Told over long distance phone of the discoveries at his home here, he asserted he was sure the stains would be found to be those of rabbits' blood, recalling again that he had gone hunting on the Saturday preceding the tragedy and that he had dressed the rabbits in the cellar at the home.

Mill Workers' Wages Cut.

Portland, Me., Nov. 25.—A readjustment of wages in the cotton mills of Maine went into effect with a reduction of 10 per cent. Approximately 13,000 employees in mills in Biddeford, Saco, Lewiston, Augusta, Waterville, Westbrook and Brunswick were affected. The last previous change in wages was in April, 1923, when a 12½ per cent increase was given.

BRIBERY CHARGED BY GOVERNMENT

Forbes and Thompson Go on Trial at Chicago.

DEFENSE SCORES TWO POINTS

Successfully Resists Government's Attempt to Have Separate Indictments United, and Obtains List of Witnesses For the Prosecution. Work of Selecting the Jury Taken Up at Once.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—The trial of Colonel Charles R. Forbes and John W. Thompson was started before Judge George A. Carpenter in federal district court here.

Forbes, former head of the veterans' bureau, and Thompson, a St. Louis contractor, are answering indictments charging them with defrauding the government and accepting bribes in connection with the building of veterans' hospitals.

The government, represented by Assistant Attorneys General Ralph Potter, John W. H. Crim and Oliver E. Pagan, moved to have the separate indictments against Forbes and Thompson united, arguing that they came out of the same transaction.

Randolph Laughlin of St. Louis, one of the attorneys for the defense, protested this motion. He argued that there was no similarity between bribery and fraud and that uniting of the indictments would work a hardship on the defendants. Judge Carpenter ended the debate by deciding that the indictments stand as returned by the federal grand jury.

James Hamilton Lewis, former United States senator from Illinois, also an attorney for the defense, then petitioned the court for a list of the government witnesses and, despite protests by Crim, Judge Carpenter ruled that the government must provide the defense attorneys with a list of its witnesses.

With these technical victories for the defense, the court then called the panel of 50 veniremen and selection of a jury was started immediately. Mrs. Heber Votaw of Washington sister of the late President Harding is one of the chief witnesses in the government's case against Forbes. During the Forbes administration she was connected with the veterans' bureau in vocational rehabilitation work.

Income taxes for the last four months were $430,119,549, while for the corresponding period in 1923 the collections were $452,387,241.

Other companies are holding to their 17-cent price, although, in some circles, it was felt that the cut of the Johnson company was likely to precipitate a price-cutting war.

EGYPT PAYS BIG INDEMNITY

Government Resigns Following the Payment.

NEW CABINET TO BE FORMED

British Troops Ordered to Occupy the Custom House at Alexandria—English Note of Saturday Forced the Resignation of Premier Zaghloul. Situation Reported to Be Far From Easy—Day's Developments.

Cairo, Nov. 25.—The Egyptian government, headed by Zaghloul Pasha, resigned, following the payment of £500,000 indemnity demanded by the British for the assassination of General Lee Stack.

Payment of the sum, which severely taxed the Egyptian treasury, was made under the guns of a British warship, the Benbow, which arrived at Alexandria. The check was accompanied by a brief note protesting that some of Britain's other demands, delivered by Lord Allenby Saturday night as a result of the fatal attack on the sirdar last Wednesday, were unjustifiable. Accordingly British troops were ordered to occupy the customs house at Alexandria as "a first measure."

Zirwar Pasha, a more moderate statesman, undertook to form a new government at the request of King Fuad.

One of Great Britain's supplementary demands was that £1,000 be paid to a native policeman, who was wounded while pursuing Sir Leo Stack's assassins last Wednesday after the sirdar had been fatally shot. The Egyptian government paid this sum and Lord Allenby went personally to the hospital and gave the money to the policeman.

Resignation of Premier Zaghloul Pasha had been a foregone conclusion because the British note of Saturday earlier criticized the Egyptian government's laxity towards extremist demonstrations, the rousing of anti-British passions such as led to the murder of Stack. The government remained in office just long enough to set the most pressing of the British demands. But the situation is far from easy, for the Egyptian government refused to accept responsibility for the murder and protested that some of Britain's other demands, having to do with withdrawal of Egyptian officers and troops from the Sudan, were unjustified.

PINCHOT SPEAKS

Holds Work of Prohibition Department a "Brutal Joke."

Columbus, Nov. 25.—Addressing the Methodist Episcopal Men's council here, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania characterized the work of the federal prohibition department as "a bitter and brutal joke," and appealed for public condemnation of buyers of illicit liquor, whose money is "the sole incentive to the bootlegger." "Attacks on the eighteenth amendment are based on nothing higher than greed or appetite," said Governor Pinchot. "The criminals who break the eighteenth amendment for their pleasure or profit can never win. We know that we shall beat them in the end, but the harm that they do in the meantime is enormous. The moral integrity of the people of the United States is at stake in this conflict. The eighteenth amendment will never be repealed. It will stand as long as alcohol is a menace to the human race. There is no fear of any successful attack on the Volstead law. That law will never be weakened. In spite of the failure at Washington, moral sentiment in America is steadily crystallizing against unlawful traffic in drink."

SECOND ARMS PARLEY

France and Japan Not Taken With Idea at This Time.

Washington, Nov. 25.—In diplomatic circles here it is said that Great Britain and the United States are substantially in accord on the proposition of staging another international arms conference as soon as possible, but that France and Japan are disinclined to go through with it this winter. This is said to be the present status of the various informal moves looking toward a second Washington conference, which President Coolidge promised he should initiate "at the proper time."

It is recalled that neither the French nor Japanese governments were wildly enthusiastic about the results of the 1922 conference here. France felt she was treated badly in the naval ratio scheme, which relegated her to a comparatively inferior position, along with Italy, and on several occasions was on the verge of bolting the whole proceeding. Japan felt aggrieved not alone because of her relegation to the three position in the 5-5-3 naval reduction plan, but also over the concessions she was forced to make in the far east.

Brookhart's Plurality.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 25.—Senator S. W. Brookhart was elected by 775 plurality over his Democratic opponent, Daniel F. Stack, the official count disclosed. Koretz, who disappeared in December, 1923, was captured at Halifax by John Starbaro and William McSwiggin, two of Crowe's assistants. He waived extradition and agreed to return at once. Crowe was told in telegram from his aides. Koretz wore a full bushy beard, his principal disguise.

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

DURING the summer I spent a month in a village in northern Michigan. The old lady in whose house I stayed was the widow of the village postmaster and had lived in that town for forty years. Naturally, she knew every man, woman and child in the place and all the details of their lives. For a month I was entertained by a first-hand history of the town and its inhabitants.

People are much alike everywhere. The story of our lives is about the same, north and south, east and west, whether we live in town or country. A great city, as O. Henry showed in his stories, is only the small town multiplied many times over. But as I listened to the old lady's stories of the people and doings in this little village, I was surprised at the number of people she told me about who had died of "consumption."

Yet this little town is a health resort. It is surrounded by pine forests. It stands on sandy soil, where drainage is easy and effective. Its water supply is remarkably pure, coming from artesian wells of unusually good water. The houses are scattered; there is abundance of pure air and sunshine; the winds off the great lake are fresh and stimulating; there are no factories to pollute the air; the people are mostly farmers or village shopkeepers and are of good sound American stock. What is the reason for the large amount of this dread disease?

The reason, I think, is that while there is an abundance of pure air outside, the people keep their doors and windows tightly shut. The winters are long and severe in this part of the country, so the houses are tightly built. As soon as cold weather comes, the houses are banked up, storm doors and windows are put on, every crevice by which cold could enter is tightly sealed up and the people live all winter in stove and furnace-heated rooms.

Even at night the windows of the bedrooms remain tightly closed; partly to save fuel and partly because many people still believe that night air is injurious. Yet the air at night is far purer and better than the air during the day. So that while thousands of patients travel hundreds of miles to California, Florida and New Mexico to get pure air, many more people develop tuberculosis through lack of pure air, which they could get by opening their windows and letting it in.

No one who sleeps every night with wide open windows need have any fear of consumption.

Useful Apple Wood

Apple wood is hard enough that when stained it can be used as an imitation of ebony. It is also employed in the manufacture of furniture, shoe lasts, small cogwheels, buttons, oriental imitations of olive wood and other objects.

Tarnished Military Record

Gen. William Hull, who surrendered Detroit without resistance to the British, August 16, 1812, was court-martialed, found guilty of cowardice and sentenced to be shot, but was saved by President Madison.

Schools of New Zealand

In addition to the mission schools in New Zealand, there are schools maintained by the inhabitants, and a Polynesian boy rarely leaves the islands to be educated in the foreign colleges.

Red Stick Indians

The Creek Indians were called Red Sticks by early Americans because in their principal village they set up a high red-painted pole as a sign of their desire for the blood of the whites.

Illuminated Seagulls

During a severe thunderstorm in the Baltic sea, seagulls were observed flying about with small blue electric flames on their beaks and at the tips of their tails and wings.

Rome's Original Name

Ancient Rome is sometimes called the "Nameless City" because it had a mysterious appellation of great antiquity, which it was death to utter. This name is said to have been Valentinia, afterward translated into the Greek word meaning Rome, and first used, among the Greek authors, either by Aristotle or Theophrastus.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES.

In addition to the early morning Episcopal service and the evening Lutheran service a Union Thanksgiving service has been arranged by the churches at the United Brethren church at 9 o'clock Thursday morning. The sermon is to be preached by Rev. E. A. Tovey of the Evangelical church. A Thanksgiving offering will be received for the Home and Hospital according to the custom of former years, when the Union service was the custom. In accordance with our American tradition and the proclamation of the president it is fitting that we preserve the reality and purpose of the day.

Friend in Need and in Deed

By DUFORD JENNE

(Copyright.)

"FRANKLY, I positively dislike you!"

Wells looked at her with admiration even as she plainly told him how she regarded him. He did not wonder that his close friend, Elmer Hayes, was finding her beauty almost mesmerizing—her dark hair, thick and lustrous, made even more unusual and appealing the odd golden tint of her eyes.

"I understand your feeling," he said calmly, "but I also know that you have stepped in between the girl to whom he is engaged and with whom he would be happy."

She laughed her metallic laugh that was far from the velvety affair she used with Elmer. "How do you know that?"

"You know very well, yourself. You are simply playing with Elmer—just as I am aware you have with others. You are shallow, treacherous, and you'll come pretty close to wrecking a fine chap and a fine girl's happiness."

"Pooh, Wells. It is unfortunate that you and I happened to grow up together. As for Elmer, I like him."

"The point is—would you marry him?"

"That is my business, my friend. Now you better go!"

When Wells reached the apartment he shared with Elmer, he found the latter busy with a small package which he was undoing.

"Look at this, old man; isn't that a beauty?" Elmer asked, his fine sensitive face lighting.

He held up a necklace, exquisitely wrought, just the kind to adorn a round, white, beautiful throat.

Wells gasped. "It's a beauty, Ed. For Ruth, I suppose."

Elmer's face changed. "Er—no. I got it for Verna."

"But—"

"Now, Mert, I know how you feel, but that's who gets it."

"All right, then, but are you sure you want to give up Ruth?"

Elmer leaned back, his eyes darkened. "I know. I ought to call things off with her—or decide. I can't bear to think of giving her up—and yet Verna—well, hang it, Verna gets it, that's certain."

"Then, why not play fair; release Ruth—there are a number who would be glad to win her."

"You're right. She telephoned that she wanted you and me to come out tonight to dinner with the family; and I'll—I'll tell her tonight." He stared at the necklace in his hand, and Wells knew it was not the necklace he was seeing but the future.

"And, remember, old pal, it's not a matter of brown hair staying brown but growing silver with the years." Wells added quietly. "Now, if I'm going with you, I must run down and get a shave."

Elmer roused himself. "All right, and, say, mail these letters and send that package by messenger. Save me the trouble."

An hour later the two friends started for the suburb where Ruth had her home. On the way little was said for their friendship was old, and mere companionship sufficed, nor was the matter that worried both of them referred to except in a comment by Elmer:

"I suppose if I step out with Ruth you will step in."

"You can bet I will try. But the gray's in my hair pretty thick. She ought to have a mate of her age. She'd be a great pal, a fine mother to his kids, and she'd be true to the end—a one-man woman."

"Mebbe," Elmer answered aimlessly.

When they found themselves, later, greeting her, all that Wells had said came back forcibly to his mind. Her dark eyes had the frank, winsome look of one whose life runs like a crystal stream, deep and peaceful, without treacherous depths of thought and mood.

Wells saw during the dinner that Elmer's eyes were often upon her, and she did look like a white rose and all the white rose signifies. "I bet he's wondering about that necklace," Wells thought, "and wishing he had it back."

When the maid called her from the table on some errand Wells looked at his chum, and the latter looked at him in dumb misery that told plainly the regret that Wells had surmised.

When she came in again her cheeks were tinted deep, her dark eyes full of a happiness that made Wells' heart ache even as his own began to pound. She stopped before them, her eyes shining on them and on Elmer.

"Don't you see, you blind ones? Mother, a gift from Elmer! Oh, you dear!" she said softly.

Around the slim, full throat was Verna's necklace. Evidently the messenger had just arrived with it.

Amid the exclamation of pleasure Wells glanced at his chum and saw him leap to his feet, gather her in his arms and kiss the white throat where the necklace lay. Her father's face was white with emotion restrained, her mother's frankly misty at the quick happiness that had come before them.

Wells took a long drink of water. On the way to the smoking room after dinner Elmer whispered in his ear: "You sent that to her instead of Verna!"

Wells nodded. Elmer pressed his hand, and said simply:

"Thank God! You're a friend in need and deed!"

Fur Collars Mark New Formal Gowns

Flat Models of Dyed Hare Have Georgette Stole at Either End.

Agnes has a collection that very much resembles her models of last winter, notes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune. The line is straight and slim, with a judicious use of the flare, and the waistline is still low. The long-lined cross-over corsage, dear to the middle-aged woman of ponderous proportions, plays a large part in this showing. Indeed, in many cases, it is so obvious that the dress is intended for this neglected portion of humanity whose existence is practically ignored by most of the other couturiers, that the slender manikins look rather ridiculous wearing them.

A new note is sounded by the separate fur collars that are made to wear with evening and afternoon gowns. They are flat, six to eight inches wide, with fur both sides, and consist of strands of dyed hare or rabbit about half a yard long. At each end is a stole of georgette crepe, about four inches of black joined by two bands of gold galon to half a yard of royal blue in one instance. A short length of dark gray joined to a longer one of lighter gray is another. These are a charming innovation and likely to be much imitated.

The jeune fille day frocks often have a turn-down polo collar under which is ted a cravat that may have tassels at the ends. This is a pretty fashion and one that is practical and becoming.

Sleeves are varied at this house. Some are long and tight fitting and some have a six-inch tight-fitting cuff and then a turned-back band of the material adorned with tucks or embroidery, with a loose top from elbow to shoulder. There are sleeves that widen to a puff just above the wrist and others that widen to bell form.

There are long loop sleeves and tiny puffs to some evening dresses, while others have a tiny flat sleeve formed by crossing a lace insertion around the décolletage, under the arm and over the shoulders.

Style of Ring to Grace Milady's Dainty Finger

"I want the big marquise ring," said the pretty girl with the handsome man in the jeweler's shop. "You're going to have the small ring with the pearl setting," said her fiancé. "I'm proud of your hands, Meg, but they are short and plump, and a marquise ring will ruin them!"

Observant man. Long-fingered ladies, with tapering digits, can wear any size or shape of ring they like, may flaunt a lump of jade on the forefinger if fancy takes them, or an inch-square opal surrounded by diamonds. While small, subdued rings may look lost on their hands, big gems suit them.

But for small hands, short, square hands, or plump hands, thin bands of gold and jewels in less flamboyant settings are best. One small diamond or pearl in a dainty setting is worth seeing on a small hand, whereas a big-stoned ring can easily spoil the wearer's appearance.

Another thing to consider is the texture and color of the skin. The woman whose hands are inclined to redness or roughness must be careful not to wear rubies, sapphires or emeralds. White stones become her best. The woman with coarse-grained hands will find that pearls sober down her skin wonderfully, and that even a single pearl ring can make all the difference to the looks of her hands.—London Answers.

LOGAN ELM

Frank Grubbs, of Good Hope, Writes
Poem on Historic Tree.

The following poem was written by Frank Grubbs, of Good Hope, Ohio, Sunday, October 5, 1924, on the occasion of the celebration of Ohio History day and is furnished us thru the courtesy of B. E. Kelley, of the Washington C. H. Herald:

The Logan Elm.

In stately majesty it stands,—

Its sturdy branches spread

As if to cloister in its folds,

The living and the dead;

Time and the ruthless hands of men

Its mates have overthrown;

Until it rears its hoary head

In solitude, alone;

Two centuries it has withstood

The buffets of the storm;

And with each passing year it seems

To take a nobler form;

A living monument it is,—

By ukase set apart

To one, who tho' of alien race

Had most a kingly heart.

O, ancient elm! When Logan stood

Beneath thy kindly shade;

He little dreamed his eloquence

For him a shrine had made;

Tho' many moons have waxed and waned

Since he, his story told;

The great tree flourishes as green

As in the days of old;

'Tis said when Indian Summer

blooms

Are tinting hill and down;

The spirit of the warrior comes

Back from his "hunting grounds,"

To smoke once more "the pipe of peace"

Beneath this ancient tree

That stands a landmark and a shrine

To the Mingo's memory.

the affair a success and desire to express their appreciation to all who they went home with thanksgiving in

HAND MANGLED

Theodore Vincent, of New Holland, Was Victim of Hunting Accident.

Theodore Vincent, 19, of New Holland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Vincent, of New Holland, and brother of Harry Vincent, employed in the Washington Savings bank was brought to the Hodson hospital in this city Saturday afternoon suffering from a gunshot wound in the left hand, caused when a shotgun he was carrying by the muzzle was discharged as he was in the act of climbing a fence while hunting near Good Hope.

The charge had penetrated the hand between the thumb and finger of the left hand, and tore away flesh and bone until it was necessary to amputate the index finger. It is believed that the remainder of the hand can be saved unless unforeseen complications occur.

Vincent, who resides at New Holland, was spending the day with his brother-in-law, Marcus King, near Good Hope, and hunting. It is supposed that in climbing the fence the hammer of the gun caught on the fence and the gun was discharged.

Vincent was taken to Dr. Wilson's office at Good Hope, and then brought to the Hodson hospital in this city where the operation was performed by Dr. Hodson.

It is the fourth hunting accident in Fayette county during the past few days.—Washington C. H. Herald.

"Athena is both comfortable and smart!"

What all women long for and some have not yet discovered—underclothing that provides at the same time the much desired trimness and a wonderful sense of ease and freedom. Athena presents just this rare combination, the necessary smartness of fit with no possibility of pulling or binding. The secret lies in the making—all Athena garments are tailored to follow the natural lines of the figure; they do not have to be stretched into shape. That's one reason why Athena forms the perfect foundation for the gown of the season.

ECONOMIZING GASOLINE

I WAS going off for a motor trip with very little knowledge of the habits and vagaries of automobiles in general and this one in particular.

"If you want to save gasoline," Spencer said to me, "drive steadily at a moderate speed. It takes gasoline to stop and start the car frequently, and nothing eats it up like pushing the machine beyond its normal speed." I was interested.

An automobile is apparently not unlike people. Kinney was building a house for me. It was begun in April and was to be finished by September. The work dragged at first and I spoke to him about it.

"Don't worry," he said, "we have oceans of time. I'll have the job finished a month before the day agreed upon." He was mistaken, however. There were delays at a crucial time, a strike laid the men off for two weeks, and when September came, although Kinney was "steppin' on 'er" hard, the house lacked a month of completion. He had wasted his opportunities at the beginning and no matter how much gasoline he used up at the end he could not make the grade.

There was Culver, on the other hand, who did his work so regularly that he never seemed rushed or worried for fear he would not be finished in season.

The fellow who does his work regularly, who keeps from worry, who sets for himself a moderate intellectual pace and keeps it every day will accomplish more by the end of the year than the fellow who works by fits and starts, who loafs at the beginning of the week, and then pushes himself to a pace of fifty miles an hour on Sunday. It is the moderate uniform rate of speed that saves the nerves and economizes the gasoline.

Very few young people give much thought to the future. The fact that they will some day be old, or weakened, or broken in strength does not occur to them. The young fellow, however, who dissipates his energies or his emotions, who lives the fast life, who taxes his physique beyond its normal resistance, ultimately pays the penalty. Before his journey is ended, his strength will be gone, the gasoline will be out.

Each of us has about so much reserve power. If we waste it today, we shall need it tomorrow. If we use up our energies in youth, we may expect a premature, weakened old age.

The Mocking Bird.

The mocking bird is a native of America and the West Indies, and is remarkable for its vocal powers and for its faculty for imitating other birds as well as different sounds which it hears. Its voice is full and musical, and capable of modulation, from the clear tone of the woodthrush to the scream of the eagle.

STATE MEETING

Ohio Pastors' Convention in Columbus,
December 26 to 28.

Rev. George Weir has returned from Columbus, where on Monday he represented the ministers of this county at a meeting of the state committee which is arranging for the Sixth Annual Ohio Pastors' convention, to be held in Columbus, under the auspices of the Ohio Council of Churches, January 26-28. He is actively engaged in seeking registration of local ministers for the convention.

Full responsibility for the convention program has been turned over to the ministers of the state by the council of churches this year, and each county ministerial association has been asked to name a representative to sit as a member of the state committee.

Plans are being laid to make this winter's convention the most successful yet held, from the standpoint both of attendance and of practical value of the programs to the attending ministers.

Sessions, including a banquet, will be held at Memorial hall, Columbus.

BADLY HURT

William McKinney Had Most Distressing Accident While Hunting.

William McKinney, of Muhlenberg township, met with a most distressing accident Thursday which almost cost him his life.

He was hunting on the farm of Mrs. Ida L. Rife when the gun he was carrying was accidentally discharged and the entire load entered his left foot, breaking all the bones.

He suffered a great loss of blood and, probably, would have perished had not Ernest McDowell carried his wounded companion across the creek and secured a wagon and took the unfortunate man to Darbyville, where Dr. F. E. Glinder attended to his injuries.

KEEPING WELL

DODGING DIABETES

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THE discovery of insulin is a great advance in the treatment of diabetes. But insulin does not in any way prevent this disease. It only enables the doctor to control it and to keep the diabetic alive a few years.

No one knows why, in some persons, diabetes occurs. But we do know that it is increasing. Doctor Joslin, one of the best-known authorities on this disease, says there are probably more than half a million persons in this country suffering from this disease.

We do know that it is more common among the well-to-do than among those in moderate circumstances. It is more common among those who lead sedentary lives than among those who do hard physical work, and, most important of all, it is much more common among the fat than the thin.

During middle life, a fat person is 40 times as apt to have diabetes as a person of normal or slightly under normal weight.

So diabetes seems to be a disease of the prosperous. Those who overeat and under-exercise are preferred candidates for this disease.

After you once get it, there is no cure. You can control it by proper living but you can't ever get entirely well again. You've got to pay the price, the rest of your life, of eating too much, especially too much sugar and starch, and working too little.

After you get it, the first thing the doctor will do will be to cut out sugar and starch and to reduce your weight. Knowing this, isn't it sensible to do these things yourself, before you are sick, rather than to wait and do the same things after it is too late?

The most common defect of middle age is overweight. Fat is not only a burden but a danger. Cut down on candy, pie, pudding and other sweets. Eat less white bread and cereals and more fresh fruit and vegetables. Drink more milk and fewer ice cream sodas. If your work doesn't give you enough exercise, give your muscles something to do that will keep them active. Drink plenty of pure water and breathe plenty of fresh air.

Good health is easy, if you will live simply. It costs less than the disease and is a great deal more comfortable.

Curious Form of Door.

One of the oldest human inventions is the door swinging on hinges at one side. Some weaving insects, such as trap-door spiders, employ a similar device. But nothing is too old or too good to escape the efforts of improvement. A Belgian, Joseph Henri Dieck, invented a door of a new type, consisting of two triangular parts which close together on a diagonal line, running from one lower corner of the door, opening to the opposite upper corner. The two parts, or leaves, are pivoted in such a manner that when opening they swing into partitions in the ceiling, leaving an entirely unobstructed passage.

HOMES RUINED BY WAR NOW REBUILT

Reconstruction in France Is Nearly Completed, U. S. Is Told.

Washington.—According to state reports given out by authorities in France, approximately 80 per cent of the houses destroyed during the war had been rebuilt by July of this year; 90 per cent of the damaged canals had been reconstructed; 80 per cent of the trenches used by the troops of both armies had been filled in, and 80 per cent of the damaged factories had been put in operation, according to the European division of the Department of Commerce. While to a great extent the repairs of damages done in the regions was executed with government aid, nevertheless, much is due to the energy and industry of private individuals and owners.

Agricultural land has been reclaimed, families have been returned to their original dwellings and manufacturing and mining industries have been put into operation. Since that time reconstruction has gone forward at an increasingly rapid rate, and with nothing intervening to interrupt the present progress it may definitely be completed before the middle of 1925.

Population Returning.

As an illustration of the improved conditions in the ten departments included in the devastated regions, particular mention may be made of the figures of increase in population and of the statistics issued by official sources regarding the resumption of activity in the various branches of industry. The pre-war population of the regions under consideration numbered 4,690,183, while at the close of the war, on November 11, 1918, this had been reduced to 2,075,067. On January 1 of this year the population amounted to 4,253,677, or only 436,506 less than at the opening of the war. In 3,239 out of 3,255 communes the local administration has been fully reorganized and the number of public schools and postoffices in these districts exceeds those of pre-war years.

Shortly before the close of the war, as is well known, a corporation was organized, known as the "Credit National," whose purpose was to facilitate the repair of damages caused by the war. The company was formed by a group of the most important French banks, with a capital of 100,000,000 francs, and its declared object was the payment in cash of compensation due to those who had suffered damages from the war and to arrange for the payment of interest on such advances. Capital required to pay for war damages was raised by the issue of interest bearing obligations in the form of bonds on which interest, redemption and premium charges were guaranteed by the state. The money for such payments being included in the French budget. Up to April 30, 1924, claimants had been paid 54,000,000,000 francs. Various methods of payment were adopted. Some of the payments were made in cash, some in kind, others in government securities.

Damages Run Into Billions.

January 1 of this year the total state liabilities definitely recognized on claims to individuals within the devastated regions amounted to 62,500,000,000 francs, and there was a further sum of more than 3,500,000,000 francs connected with contested decisions. It is expected that an additional 10,000,000,000 francs will be awarded, bringing the total of damages up to approximately $2,500,000,000 francs. As will be seen, therefore, approximately 28,000,000 still remain due to sufferers of the war, after deduction of the 54,000,000,000 already paid.

Although the French government is undertaking the responsibility for financing reconstruction, a considerable part of the direct burden of cash payment has been distributed among different agencies. The French treasury, at the end of 1923, had furnished almost 22,000,000,000 francs, while the Credit National had provided another 22,000,000,000. At the end of April the Credit National had increased its cash payments to a total of over 24,000,000,000, and this, added to the amounts furnished by the government, and certain annuity certificates, made a total of 54,000,000,000 francs paid.

Fifty per cent of farming lands have been restored and three-fourths of the coal mines are now operating.

Cat Points Ring

Mauch Chunk, Pa.—John Moyer of Mauch Chunk had an unusual experience while putting up a radio aerial at Packerton. He lost a valuable diamond ring and after hunting for it a long time, got discouraged and was about to give up the search, when his attention was attracted by the queer movements of a pet cat. He noticed the feline watching something and occasionally walking toward him. He followed the cat and, sure enough, there lay the diamond ring.

Cash Found on Sea

Malaga, Spain.—A strong box filled with bank notes floating upon the sea off Estopona almost gave fishermen who found it attacks of heart failure. The notes were of the new republic of Rif, formed by the outlaw tribesmen in Africa, and of no value except to the Rifians.

CANNED PEAS

Ross County Leads and Pickaway Second—Convention in Columbus.

Ross county cans more peas than any other county in the state, according to Roy Irons, of Clyde, secretary of the Ohio Canners association, who is making arrangements for the organization's annual convention in Columbus, December 9 and 10. Pickaway county ranks second in the canning of peas.

There are also pea canning plants in Mercer, Logan, Champaign, Fairfield, Pickaway and one or two other counties in the state.

Sanitary laws, fertilizing of canners' crops and the grading of canned goods for quality will be among the important matters to be considered at the coming convention, according to Mr. Irons.

AUTO VICTIM KILLS SELF

Companion Loses Life and Two Others Are Injured Seriously.

Hamilton, O., Nov. 25.—Vassie Combs, 22, shot and killed himself while pinned under an automobile which crushed the life out of Louis Simpson, 22, a companion. The hub of the auto from which he was hurled rested upon his chest and several ribs were broken. Simpson was killed instantly when the steering post behind which he was seated drove into his chest. Two others in the roadster, Louis Lakes, 23, and John Combs, 23, brother of the dead man, were injured less seriously. Unable to free their companion, they went for help. Combs, suffering agony from his crushed breast, managed to drag his revolver from his hip pocket, aimed it at his head and fired. The bullet struck him in the eye and when help arrived he was dead.

Chiropactors at Odds.

Columbus, Nov. 25.—Ohio chiropactors are at odds over the initiative measure to be presented before the next session of the state legislature. This was disclosed at a meeting of about 250 chiropactors here. Licensed chiropactors offer opposition to the measure on the grounds that it will lower the educational requirements. Unlicensed practitioners declare the measure offers the only solution to the problem resulting from the alleged hostility of the medical board. They declare that it is unfair to have chiropactors examined by the medical board.

Bible Thought for Today

HOW GOD BLESSES.—The Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice.—Deut. 16:15.

Have Faith in Cross of Money. On the island of Rhodes the husband traces a cross in honey over the door before his new bride enters the house, and this little operation is said to guarantee their eternal happiness.
